Application and Scene

The Life Cycle Figure Model is a set of highly detailed and realistic models that are designed to illustrate the different stages of human life. These models are perfect for educational purposes, as well as for collectors and display in various settings.

Architecture Landscape Model

The Architecture Landscape Model is a set of miniature models that depict the different stages of human development, from birth to old age. These models can be used in classrooms, museums, and other educational settings to teach about the physical changes that occur in the human body as we age. They can also be used in architectural and landscape design projects to simulate the impact of human life on the environment.

Human Body Organs Model

The Human Body Organs Model is a set of detailed models that illustrate the internal organs of the human body. These models are perfect for medical students, doctors, and other healthcare professionals to study and understand the complex functions of the human body. They can also be used in hospitals and clinics for patient education and to demonstrate surgical procedures.

Human Body Skeleton Model

The Human Body Skeleton Model is a set of highly accurate and movable models that depict the skeletal structure of the human body. These models are ideal for anatomy classes, as well as for use in forensic investigations and criminal justice settings. They can also be used in museums and exhibits to showcase the different types of skeletal structures found in humans and animals.

Human Body Muscles Model

The Human Body Muscles Model is a set of detailed models that demonstrate the muscles in the human body and how they work together to enable movement. These models are perfect for physical therapy and sports training, as well as for use in fitness centers and gyms. They can also be used in research and development for the design of prosthetics and other medical devices.
